

Faster method of interlibrary article delivery. Would you like to receive your articles by email?

There is now a new email delivery option.

It is now possible to have the articles that you have requested via our interloans service emailed directly to you in a PDF format. There are a couple of things you will need to check and possibly set up first.

Please test you can download the article before requesting articles by email. In order to be able to download the emailed articles you will need to have version 7.0 Adobe on your computer, or later. Once you have installed the correct version of Adobe Reader, you should test it's working by downloading a test document from the British Library website:

<http://www.bl.uk/reshelp/atyourdesk/docsupply/productsservices/sed/>

You can also find out more about installing Adobe reader, if you click on their link More help with Adobe Reader on this website

Once Adobe is set up on your computer, you can start using this service. So that we know you would like articles emailed direct to you, please indicate in the box provided on the paper forms, or on the online form please type in the comments field box that you would like articles sent by email. Important: if we don't have your email address, please add it to the form

Downloading your articles

The emails from the British Library will be from this address; archie@bl.uk.

Once you open your email you will see this sentence; 'Click here to download your Secure Electronic Document'. Click on the embedded link to download your article.

The document can be opened for 14 days from the date it is received. It is important to note that the link can only be opened once, however when this is done the document itself is downloaded into the 'Digital Editions' area of the Adobe software, and can be viewed as many times as you want during the 14-day period of access. It can only be printed once, or twice if the printer fails.

It's best not to request emailed articles just before going away for a fortnight or longer, as you may lose your chance to access the article.

We will still need you to sign a copyright form for any online requests, we will send you a blue copyright form, please send this back ASAP so that we can meet this legal requirement.

If you have any problems downloading your articles just let us know, or see the problem solving section below. Please do not email back to the archie@bl.uk email address, or contact the British Library about any problems, as they prefer questions to come via us.

If you have any queries about any of the above please don't hesitate to ask us. Call 020 8725 5251 or email intloan@sgul.ac.uk

Possible problems and how to solve them

Q) Adobe asks for the E books reader to download your article

A) In Adobe, scroll down to the bottom of the page to where it prompts you to 'click here if your computer is already set up for this' (or words to this effect) and click on this option.

Q) It just won't download

A) It could be that you don't have the correct version of Adobe Reader installed, version 7.0 or later. Have you downloaded a test document from this website: <http://www.bl.uk/reshelp/atyourdesk/docsupply/productsservices/sed/> ? See the information about Adobe reader on this website too.

OR

A) It may be that there are too many internet files stored on your computer, and so your article won't download until you delete some. To do this, open internet explorer or the intranet homepage, go to tools, then internet options and then click on the delete files option.

Extra information – deleting stored articles

If you are ordering a lot of articles you may want to delete the old ones to save space on your computer. The old ones are stored in 'Digital Editions'. To delete them, open Adobe Reader. Go to file, then Digital Editions, then My Digital Editions. Click on the document, then right click and choose Remove. They are also stored in My Documents. To remove from here, open My Documents, then open the My Digital Editions folder, and then delete the documents.
